22. Best Practices adopted, if any

Best Practice-I

1. Title of the Practice:

Inculcating values and a sense of responsibility in the Students through volunteering and participating in social campaigns organized by Dr. K.N. Modi Institute of Pharmaceutical Education and Research

2. Objectives of the Practice

- Serving society to the best of our capacity should be our prime motto. Various social issues like child labor, poverty and lack of education etc always attract our students and hence, it is important to encourage them to be at the forefront of change for these social issues.
- By inculcating values of humanity, sympathy, empathy and change makers, the students not only excel in their professional careers but are also able to bring positive transformation in the society.
- Spending time with the underprivileged and the unfortunate, the students become more aware of their surroundings and the ground reality. This makes them more conscious of their decisions and how it may impact the marginalized community.

3. The Context

Students should be reasonably sensitive for the society around them and every effort should be directed to make the students dedicated and committed towards bringing positive changes in the society.

4. The Practice

- ‘Pahal –Ek Prayas’ is a registered NGO which very often conducts its activities in association with Dr. KNMIPER college.
- This NGO primarily focuses on fighting against the various social stigmas in our society, lack of education, eradicating social evils, spreading awareness about women empowerment etc.
- Plenty of activities are organized by the NGO in the same direction. Weekend teaching programs in which a group of students go to nearby village areas to impart education to the underprivileged children every week.

- Events like Grain distribution, clothes distribution, et c. are organized regularly.
- It is very relevant to clarify here that there are many type of students available in our colleges. All have different family background. Some of the students are from a financially weaker section; some of such students are also provided financial aid through our NGO.

5. Evidence of Success

- As a Result of our continuous efforts, we have seen increasing numbers of volunteering requests in NGO by our students.
- Students are now much more sensitive and aware of their privileges and are determined to give back to the society.

6. Problems Encountered and Resources Required

- Maintaining strict discipline throughout the activity is very important for the good impact on the concerned people. Over excitement and young age are the prime factors responsible for this. So sufficient number of faculty members are to be deputed to serve the purpose.
- Proper counseling and training is important to get success in such kind of campaigns.
- Normally it is tough for all the students to get motivated and oriented for such activities

Best Practices II

1. Title of the Practice:

Innovative research based Projects

2. Objective of the Practice:

- To make the students research oriented. Innovation and research are the backbone of pharmacy education. Implementing new ideas in medicines and pharmaceutical field is really very exciting and interesting for the students.
- To familiarize the students with the application part of the knowledge and skills acquired by them during their course work.
- To make the students aware about the benefits of team- minded approach.
- To develop practical skills in the students.

3. The Context:

- Students come to know about the expectation of industry from the academia. Students get opportunity to apply the theoretical knowledge to do further research in the related areas.
- Students avail opportunities to have hands on experience to know the working principles various sophisticated instruments during the research projects.

4. The Practice:

- Project Selection – occasional industrial visits are organized for various departments at regular intervals so the students can keep track of the new activities in their fields, interact with industry professionals and identify their area of interest. Once the students are clear with their vision, they are encouraged to put forth their ideas and start working on them.
- Faculty members have been asked to guide and supervise these projects of students right from idea to the implementation part.
- Presentation of projects – two of the projects are completed, they are displayed in various competitions, events and exhibitions.

Evidence of Success

- These projects help the students to perform better in their theory examinations as the experience achieved by them is very important and crucial.
- Comprehensive knowledge of theoretical principles and practical applications help to facilitate better placement opportunities for the students

5. Problems Encountered And Resources Required:

- Financial and Time constraints are there. Hence the students are encouraged to think about rational projects..
- Active involvement of faculty members is required to guide and advise students apart from the regular classroom curriculum.
